

WHAT IS RECOVERY AND WHAT IS NEEDED TO SUPPORT IT?

H. Harrington (Bo) Cleveland, Ph.D., J.D.

GUEST SPEAKER

Bo Cleveland's career is devoted to understanding differences in the impact of environments on peoples' experiences and behaviors. An underlying assumption of his work is that experiences, such as those within families and friendships, act together with individuals' characteristics to shape developmental outcomes, such as substance use and abuse as well as the impact of these behaviors on people's lives. Bo focuses on gene environment interactions impacting initiation and escalation of substance use among adolescents; and understanding within-person processes that underlie relapse and recovery from substance abuse.

FRIDAY, DEC. 4, 2020

Noon - 1 p.m. CST

Virtual Zoom Seminar

Advanced registration required

Click to Register or visit NCWRecovery.org

DESCRIPTION

This course is designed for medical professionals, faculty and students interested in learning about the structural and social factors referred to as recovery capital that influence individuals' abilities to build and sustain long-term recovery.

Participants can expect to learn why recovery is difficult, what recovery is and how recovery capital underlies the likelihood of the types of programs that support recovery across different contexts.