

GRADUATE PROGRAMS

OSU Center for Health Sciences

Learning About Job Opportunities

Learning About Job Opportunities

Successful job campaigns identify information about the best potential employers and job openings. Limiting your knowledge by relying on only a few sources of information may cost you an opportunity to get a better job. The following list of resources may help you identify employers and jobs.

PERSONAL CONTACTS:

Family	Friends	Mentors, senior level contacts
Neighbors	Fellow job seekers	Former teachers & counselors
Sports contacts	References	School or college associates

EMPLOYMENT-RELATED CONTACTS:

Fellow employees	Ask people who turned you down for other leads
Former employers and co-workers	Bulletin board job postings
“Informational interview” employers

JOB REFERRAL SERVICES:

Professional Development
Private employment agencies	Professional association services
Job or resume banks	State and Federal employment offices
Executive search firms

PUBLISHED SOURCES OF EMPLOYER INFORMATION:

Chamber of Commerce Directories	Newspaper classified ads
Professional magazine ads	Ads in old newspapers and magazines
Telephone Books	Financial pages of newspapers

SPECIALIZED REFERENCE BOOKS AND PERIODICALS (A FEW EXAMPLES)

The College Placement Annual	The National Job Market
Career Guide to Professional Associations	National Business Employment Weekly
The National & Regional Job Bank Finder	The Professional & Trade Association Job

MAKE DIRECT CONTACT WITH EMPLOYERS:

Career fairs	Unsolicited letter of application and resume
Want ads for yourself	Volunteer, unpaid, temporary, or part-time work
Walk-in contacts	Telephone job search
	Company information session

USE THE PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT WEB SITE

- Look at job postings and the on-campus interview schedule
- Build a resume to be made available to inquiring employers
- Participate in the on-campus mock interview process
- Read about upcoming job search development programs, employer info sessions, etc.

Summary of The Top 10 Job Search Methods suggested by Professional Development!

Professional Development recommends that all job seekers take advantage of several methods of conducting a job search. The following 10 ways can prove invaluable, especially when several or all are used. While we recognize that networking among personal and professional contacts has been identified as the #1 way to find a job, we also suggest learning about job openings in every way possible. Taking part in several of these ten job search methods can greatly enhance your employment opportunities.

1. Networking
2. LinkedIn
3. Professional Development Webinars
4. Staffing Agencies
5. Internet Job Search
6. Professional Association Involvement
7. Informational Interviews
8. Newspaper Job Listings
9. Direct employer contacts
10. Employment agencies